

A publisher may request the State Board of Education accept a more recent edition as a substitute for any curricular material officially on the state adoption list.

In order to meet the qualifications for approval, a new edition of a state-adopted curricular material must:

1. Be submitted to the Idaho State Department of Education by the publisher with a letter of request specifying the category of the adopted edition, title, author, copyright, and publication dates of the substitution edition, and the copyright and publication dates of the previously adopted edition. The publisher must state that the substituted curricular materials will be supplied to Idaho schools at the contract price of the originally adopted edition. The letter must also include a list of the changes made between the two editions.
2. Be provided in addition and not in place of the adopted edition. School districts cannot be required to use a substituted edition or version of a state adopted curricular material, but both editions must be available for distribution. However, the Board may determine that it is not required for the originally adopted edition be available for distribution if the substitution only contains minor copyright revisions, or revisions that ensure the edition is current and accurate.
3. Be compatible with the previous edition or version in pagination, illustrations, content, etc., to the extent that the curricular materials may be easily interchanged in the classroom.
